

Katherin Alfonso
University of East Anglia (Norwich, UK)

Seminar on

"Kondh Adivasi diversified agroecological food system:
A food sovereignty analysis on the interaction with OMM in Odisha, India"

Venue: Seminar Hall, NCDS Bhubaneswar

Date: 13/09/2019 Time: 3.30 P.M.

Katherin Alfonso is currently finishing her Master Degree in Agriculture and Rural Development at the University of East Anglia (Norwich, UK). Interested in millet farming and tribal communities, she came to Odisha in June 2019 to understand the role of OMM on the enhancing of food sovereignty and local food governance on Kondh communities. She conducted research during her internship with the NGO Living Farms in the district of Rayagada and now is on the data analysis phase. She holds a BSc in Social Communication Sciences from the Pontifical Xaverian University (Bogota, Colombia) and had been working for more than three years on communication for development for different farmer's associations and NGO's, and as an investigative agricultural journalist for media in South America like La República, Agri-Business' Magazine, America's Agriculture and TV AGRO.